John Fiedler receives H.O.P.E. award

John Fiedler was presented the 31st annual "Hope Outstanding Professor Educator" (H.O.P.E.) award by the Class of '95.

Professor Fiedler, an adjunct assistant professor of English, was honored during the college's annual Honors Convocation, held in Dimnent Memorial Chapel on Thursday, April 27. The award, first given in 1965, is presented by the graduating class to the professor who they feel epitomizes the best qualities of the Hope College educator.

He is the fourth member of the college's English faculty to receive the award.

"I'm very pleased that John Fiedler has been selected by the seniors as the winner of the H.O.P.E. award this year," said Hope College President Dr. John H. Jacobson. "John is known for his engaging style of teaching and his great interest in his students. He's a person who really takes time to get to know his students, and is genuinely interested in their personal and academic development."

Professor Fiedler joined the Hope faculty in 1986 as an intern in the department of English, and subsequently served as both a part-time teaching associate and as a full-time visiting instructor in English. He was appointed to his current rank of adjunct assistant professor in 1992.

His courses during the 1994-95 academic year included "Writing and the Movies," "Expository Writing II," "Western World Literature I" and "Western World Literature II." His activities during the 1994-95 school year also included organizing the college's DeGraaf Lecture in October. During the 1989-90 academic year he portrayed Walt Whitman in Hope's "Rendezvous with History," subtitled "Nature and Man: Partnership vs. Acid Reign," which was presented during the Arts and Humanities Fair for high school students in September and during the Alumni Association's Winter Happening in February.

Professor Fiedler holds his bachelor's degree from Whitman College in Walla Walla, Wash., where he majored in English. He graduated summa cum laude, and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, in 1980.

He earned his master of arts degree, also in English, from the University of Washington, Seattle, in 1983. He has done additional graduate work at the University of Chicago, from which he received a University Scholarship.

Professor Fiedler's wife, Julie, is also an adjunct assistant professor of English at Hope. She has also been a member of the college's faculty since 1986. ✍

This year's H.O.P.E. winner, John Fiedler, with Mortar Board president Jenifer Hodge '95 of Traverse City, Mich.

"Quote, unquote"

Quote, unquote is an eclectic sampling of things said at and about Hope College.

"A study done a number of years ago...showed on average that reptiles differ from mammals in brain size by a factor of 10. So for a common body size, a typical mammal has a 10-times larger brain. And on average, dinosaurs had a reptilian brain size—that is to say, the brains to be found in dinosaurs would be about the size to be expected in a living reptile of dinosaurian size.

"This study takes that concept farther. This index of brain size of 'one' is the brain size of an American alligator blown up to appropriate dinosaurian size. So it's an index for comparing dinosaurs.

"The saurpods dinosaurs—the greatest of all dinosaurs—are very small-brained creatures. These are animals...10, 20, 30 tons in weight, animals 70, 80, 90 feet long, but with skulls about the size of a horse skull, and a brain a 10th the size of a horse brain. So they only have about 20 percent of the brain size that you would expect to find in an alligator...

"This next group of dinosaurs, the ankylosaurs and the stegosaurs, are somewhat larger brained but still rather small—only about half the brain size to be expected in an alligator.

"Collectively I would call all three of these archaic herbivores. They were okay, and they were successful dinosaurs on their own terms, but they were sort of Model Ts of the dinosaur world. They're not real progressive.

"The dinosaurs with the largest brains of any of the four-legged dinosaurs are the ceratopsian dinosaurs. They are approaching the alligator level.

"The biggest brains of the plant eating dinosaurs are found in the two-legged dinosaurs, the ornithomimids, including the duck-bills. Again, the duck-bills were a late group of dinosaurs. They had interesting skulls with crests and frills. They had complex teeth. They behaved—they interacted. Furthermore, they had a mechanical requirement: it takes more balance, more brainpower, to stand on two legs than it does to stand on four legs. So, larger brains in the ornithomimids.

"The meat eaters—tyrannosaurus—larger brains still. Up to twice the size to be found in alligators. This is not a surprise; it makes ecological sense. What kind of animals do we keep in our houses as pets? We keep carnivores—dogs and cats. Carnivores are always intelligent animals. They perceive the environment, they interact.

"This is our friend tyrannosaurus. Tyrannosaurus was an animal with an enormous skull: four-and-a-half feet long; huge, huge skull. The size of the brain inside that head was about 500 cubic centimeters. That is larger than a gorilla brain, larger than a chimpanzee brain.

"If you forget about the last five million years of evolution, tyrannosaurus had one of the largest brains ever to evolve in the history of life on earth. And I would not want my survival to depend on the assumption that it was a stupid animal. Tyrannosaurus was probably not a stupid animal.

"An interesting group are, as I say, the raptors. Small meat-eating dinosaurs had large brains. [They were certainly in the lower size of the mammalian range.]

"This character is an interesting character. This is the real velociraptor of Jurassic Park. Unfortunately, Michael Crichton got it wrong...velociraptor was quite a small dinosaur.

"Michael Crichton wanted velociraptor to be as smart as a chimpanzee. Would that it were so. It was not so. That's a gross exaggeration. The way I read it is that if a velociraptor and an opossum sat down to a chess game it would have been a draw.

"However, raptors were very, very poor losers. I will say that."

—Dr. Peter Dodson of the University of Pennsylvania, who presented "Hot and Cold Running Dinosaurs - Metabolism and Migration" while on campus on Thursday, March 2, as the Sigma Xi National Lecturer. ✍

On the cover

Lincoln Elementary School students provided an enthusiastic audience as Belt and Beeuwkes cottages traveled south along Columbia Avenue to new homes on 15th Street on Wednesday, May 10. The two houses are among 16 on Ninth and 10th streets being relocated or demolished to make way for the new Haworth Conference Center and Cook Residence Hall. Some have wondered how well Belt and Beeuwkes might have worked as Tulip Time floats if only the move had waited a week or so...

More about the relocation is on page nine.

Notice of Nondiscrimination

Hope College is committed to the concept of equal rights, equal opportunities and equal protection under the law. Hope College admits students of any race, color, national and ethnic origin, sex, creed or handicap to all the rights, privileges, programs and activities generally accorded or made available to students at Hope College, including the administration of its educational policies, admission policies, scholarship and loan programs, and athletic and other school-administered programs. With regard to employment, the College complies with all legal requirements prohibiting discrimination in employment.

SUPPORT NEEDED: Hope has experienced a decline in the number of alumni who have contributed to the Alumni Fund, with 1994-95 lagging behind the previous year. Traditionally, the college's alumni participation level has ranked among the highest in the nation.

The participation level is an important consideration to organizations evaluating the college, such as many college guides and gift-making foundations. They interpret the level of participation as a measure of the value alumni place on the quality of their education.

To achieve 50 percent participation, something of a grail among colleges and universities, Hope would need 9,700 donors. To reach even last year's participation, between 40 and 45 percent, Hope would need 8,034 donors. As of the end of April, Hope had 6,528 donors—down from 7,079 at the same time a year before.

The financial support is needed also. As of the end of May, the college was more than $200,000 below its $1.2 million Alumni Fund goal.

The fiscal year ends June 30.

VOLUNTEER HONORS: The Michigan Campus Compact has honored Shannon Moses '95 of Mt. Prospect, Ill., and Deborah Weiss '75 Sturtevant of the college's sociology and social work faculty for outstanding volunteerism.

The Michigan Campus Compact (MCC) presented Moses with its "Student Community Service Award" and Sturtevant with its "Faculty/Staff Community Service-Learning Award" during a luncheon at Michigan State University in East Lansing on Thursday, March 30.

All of the 23 colleges and universities that are members of MCC were given the opportunity to have one student and one member of their faculty or staff honored with one of the awards. Moses and Professor Sturtevant were chosen as Hope's recipients through nomination by members of the Hope community and review by a committee of Hope professors and administrators.

"Shannon and Professor Sturtevant both exemplify the ideal in commitment to service," said Alfredo Gonzales, who is assistant provost and oversees the volunteer services program at Hope, in addition to serving as the college's liaison to MCC.

"Shannon has been active with Habitat for Humanity and as a volunteer in other ways, showing herself willing to take God's gifts and put them to work in the community for the betterment of others," he said. "Professor Sturtevant promotes volunteerism in her academic work and encourages students to become actively engaged in service opportunities, and models the importance of linking community service and education."

GARDEN DANCING: Two Hope dance students and a recent graduate provided part of the entertainment during the opening gala for the Frederik Meijer Gardens in Grand Rapids, Mich., on Wednesday, April 19.

William Crawley '92 of Park Ridge, Ill., Katherine Borton '95 of Hinsdale, Ill., and Kathleen Dominiak '95 of Whiting, Ind., danced in character as birds and a butterfly during the event. Two other area dance groups complemented their work as animals and flowers.

The facility includes a five-story, 15,000 square foot conservatory named for Lena Meijer, Meijer's wife. Those attending the opening included former president Gerald R. Ford.

Bunko says farewell

Campus legend Norm "Bunko" Japinga has retired after 27 years on the college's staff.

Bunko, who came to Hope in 1968, served in the college's equipment room for many years and as a bus driver for athletic teams and other groups. Outgoing and personable, he has been a familiar figure to Hope's student-athletes—including in recent years the children of those who were students early in his tenure with the college.

"He is fun to be around. The students love him to drive, and when I think of Bunko I think of someone that's honest. Someone that's upbeat. Someone that is people-oriented," said Ray Smith, director of men's athletics and professor of physical education, whose association with Bunko extends back to his own arrival at the college in 1969.

"I think that he's developed a very strong, warm affection for Hope College over the years—and I think vice versa: Hope has developed a strong, warm affection for Bunko as well," he said. "So it's been a great working relationship, and he certainly will be missed as a person here on campus."

Bunko joined the staff as Hope's first official equipment manager, with custodial duties in the old Carnegie-Schouten gym and responsibility for the college's fledgling transportation department (a couple VW buses) added in. In 1974 he became full-time equipment manager—a position he held until 1988, when arthritis compelled him to spend less time on his feet. He was assistant equipment manager and head bus driver from 1988 to 1992, and in 1992 stopped working in the equipment room and became a part-time driver.

His years with the college also gave him the opportunity to serve in other ways, including by keeping score during athletic contests, and even twice filling in when the coaches of the women's basketball and wrestling teams were ill. In addition, he officiated with the Holland Recreation Department for many years, and was recognized for the service by the State of Michigan in 1988.

Bunko, who turned 65 in February, decided to retire so that he and wife Shirley can travel and to have time to pursue other interests. He notes, though, that he has mixed feelings about leaving the college.

"I'm sure I'll miss it," he said. "It's been a lot of fun and I've really enjoyed it."

He also notes that retirement from Hope is not likely to be an absolute condition. He hopes to continue to do some driving for the college's teams. ➤

A familiar figure to Hope student-athletes, Norm "Bunko" Japinga retired earlier this month. He is pictured during the basketball playoffs in February, when the college recognized his 65th birthday. He is pictured with granddaughter Rachel Claire, daughter of Jodi Japinga '75 Syens and Marvin Syens '75 of Holland, Mich.

The dancers, elaborately costumed, added life and movement to the botanical setting, according to Maxine DeBruyn, professor of dance and chairperson of the department, who served as one of the event's choreographers.

"It added accent to the gardens," she said. "It had a real aesthetic environmental quality about it."

Correspondingly, the Hope dancers were selected for how well they fit the avian and insectoid roles they were to play. "They were chosen for their ability to carry the bird and the butterfly characteristics throughout," Professor DeBruyn said.

She rates the experience highly. "It was wonderful. They got to work with professional makeup artists and costume designers—and costume painters," she said. "This was done in the grandest style. It was gorgeous."

NSF SUMMER SUPPORT: The departments of biology, chemistry, computer science and mathematics at Hope College each hold grants for summer student research from the National Science Foundation's "Research Experiences for Undergraduates" (NSF-REU) program. This is the fourth consecutive year that four of the college's science departments have held the highly competitive grants at the same time.

Through the grants, undergraduate students from both Hope and elsewhere are conducting research on a full-time basis with Hope faculty members for eight to 11 weeks this summer, and are receiving stipends as well as support for summer housing, travel and other expenses. They are with students whose summer research at Hope is being supported in other ways.

The departments of biology, chemistry and mathematics are all in the second year of multi-year grants, while the department of computer science—which completed a three-year grant last summer—is in the first year of a new three-year grant.

CAREER SERVICE: Hope has joined the BarterBase Consortium, adding a comprehensive, national database of more than 1,500 organizations with current or anticipated positions or internships to the college's list of resources for job-seeking seniors.

The 1994-95 year was Hope's first in the consortium, which was established in 1992 and has 20 liberal arts colleges and universities as members. Each participating institution uses the Internet to provide and update information in a specific field, and in effect barter its list for the 19 others.

The system gives job-seeking students more information collectively than the schools could ever provide on their own, according to Dale Austin, who is director of career services at Hope.

Categories in the BarterBase database range from "archaeological opportunities" to "bank trainee," "environmental," "performing arts and museums," "physical science," "public policy," "sports management," and "travel and tourism." Hope's contribution is a list of 130 job opportunities from 102 non-profit organizations working with children and youth.

Hope's students use the database by telling the college's Office of Career Services which areas interest them, and can receive the information, including contact and company names, addresses and in some cases descriptions of specific openings, as either a print-out or on a computer disk. The students are then free to pursue any of the opportunities that appeal to them.

FACULTY KUDOS:

NEH EVENTS: The National Endowment for the Humanities chose three members of the Hope faculty to participate in programs it is coordinating during the summer.

Dr. Marc Baer, professor of history, will participate in an NEH Summer Seminar on "The Culture of London, 1850-1925," to be held at the University of London in England. Dr. James Herrick, associate professor of communication and chair of the department, was selected for an Institute concerning "Institutions of the Enlightenment: The Invention of the Public Sphere," to be held in at Stanford University in California. Dr. G.L. Penrose, professor of history, was chosen to participate the Institute "American Wars in Asia: A Cultural Approach," to be held at the University of Montana, Missoula.

Selection for participation in the programs is highly competitive. Dr. Baer, for example, was one of only 12 accepted out of 120 applications.

WORK POETRY: Poems by Jackie Bartley and Jack Ridl of the English faculty appear in the recently released For A Living: The Poetry of Work, edited by Nicholas Coles and Peter Oresick and published by the University of Illinois Press.

Messages focus on life learning

The Class of 1995 was marking the end of its undergraduate career during the college's Commencement exercises on Sunday, May 7, but both of the event's speakers emphasized learning still to come.

Kgothatso Semela '95, a graduating senior from Soweto, South Africa, asked her classmates to actively examine their beliefs. The first student to speak at a Hope commencement since 1973, she stressed the importance of developing an understanding that accepts others.

"Does what I believe allow me to be, and allow others to be as well, so that we might share this shrinking world without one of us stifling the other?" she said. "Or do those convictions which I cherish require that I inadvertently hurt those with whom I do not identify, or those who do not identify with me, object or ridicule that which I hold dearest to me?"

Dr. James Allis, associate professor of philosophy, encouraged the graduates to be willing to identify and face the questions that arise in their lives, as a way of finding self-fulfillment.

"Each of our lives, our being in this ambiguous world, is a question, and a big part of our humanity involves living with our families and with a number of others in a variety of contexts in which we pose our questions to each other," he said. "Our ability or inability to discern our questions, our ability or inability to live with our questions, makes up a significant chunk of who we are."

More than 4,000 attended the college's 130th Commencement, held in Holland

Churches.

"What I would like to suggest," Semela said, "is that as we move away, be it figuratively or literally from this place, we move on to other pursuits and places with a sense of scrutiny of what is expected by others and, more critically, of what we expect and demand of ourselves. We must examine those things which we hold dearest to us—not just those beliefs we uphold and the stands we take, but the very reasons we cling to our beliefs."

Semela suggested that her listeners do so by creating "a space between these boundaries and their margins—a space where the difficult task of authentic self-critique can take place."

"What do I mean by 'creating space?' Creating space means thinking the unthought," she said. "It is where the inconceivable is conceived. It is the sorrow and the playfulness of the absurdity of bittersweet moments."

Semela stressed that such examination does not mean holding convictions lightly. Rather, she noted, it is a necessary step to developing a structure of beliefs that makes it possible to coexist in a diverse world.

"It is only when we walk on the fringes and in that space which expands the boundaries, that we may be able to achieve a sense of how to better live with others in a world that is complex and full of questions and absurd elations."

Dr. Allis's discussion of questions focused on helping the graduates determine the ones that matter to them. He read from a letter from a recent graduate, who reported a sense of hollowness.

"These words reveal what you know already—that with all its excitement and opportunity, the world can nevertheless be a harsh, demanding and unforgiving place," he said. "It can change us in ways that we do not want or intend."

"Our ability or inability to discern our questions, our ability or inability to live with our questions, makes up a significant chunk of who we are."

— Dr. James Allis
Associate Professor of Philosophy

Municipal Stadium. Parents from throughout the United States and as far away as Australia, Bulgaria and South Africa were present.

In addition to recognizing approximately 500 graduates, the college presented honorary degrees to two alumni: Dr. John E. Visser '42 of Vassar, Kan., who is president emeritus of Emporia State University, and the Rev. Dr. Arthur O. Van Eck '48 of Waldwick, N.J., who is director of the Department of Bible Translation and Utilization of the National Council of

The graduates can find help in the struggle, Dr. Allis said, by being aware of their own stories.

"Listening to and telling stories seem to be crucial, for without the chance to tell our stories, we don't have the chance to discern our questions, we don't know who we are and who we might become," he said. "It's important to find those few people with whom we can tell our genuine stories, with whom we can speak our truths."

"Along the way, you may need to reach pretty deep inside to draw on the courage

After a busy day that included both Baccalaureate and Commencement, two graduates take a moment to say congratulations.

that is within you," he said. "You may encounter people and events that will try, sometimes with the best of intentions, to take your story away from you, and you may find yourselves needing to fight to follow your own story."

"This courage to live with the questions also requires a willingness to make mistakes, to be wrong, to try again and again," Dr. Allis said. "For mistakes there will be aplenty, but in making your mistakes, as opposed to somebody else's, something may begin to happen."

Dr. Nancy Sonneveldt '62 Miller's Baccalaureate sermon, delivered earlier in the day in Dimnent Memorial Chapel, focused on the way that Hope, as a Christian college, provided the graduates with a perspective for living that other sorts of colleges and universities would not.

She considered dimensions of the graduates' Hope experience as a game of Trivial Pursuit, in which players answer questions in different categories to win. Dr. Miller's categories both shared specific facts—such as, for example, the fact that the chapel was named for Hope's fifth president, Edward Dimnent (Class of 1896), and the number of graduates—and included a more general discussion of the way in which the college approaches scholarship in a context of faith.

"Like graduates on more than 1,000 campuses across the U.S., you have experienced intellectual rigor," said Dr. Miller, who is dean for the social sciences and a professor of education at Hope. "You've done what was asked of you and you're receiving a diploma—either today or sometime soon."

"Like graduates everywhere, you have matured. College seniors are different from first year students, aren't they," she said. "Like grads everywhere, you've been challenged along the way to moral integrity and responsibility."

"Unlike college graduates everywhere, you should have encountered God, had a sense of God's presence in the lives of people and recognized what a difference that can make," Dr. Miller said. "Unlike graduates elsewhere you've viewed knowledge through the eyes of your discipline and through the eyes of faith."

"We all know it doesn't really matter who Dimnent was—it's nice to know—or how many of you are graduating today," she said. "That's really trivia, nothing more."

"I simply want to take this last opportunity to remind you that there is more to life than academic pursuit. It's the pursuit of God and of God's son, Jesus Christ," Dr. Miller said. "And that pursuit is not trivial at all."

Kgothatso Semela '95 of Soweto, South Africa, was the first student to present an address during Commencement in more than 20 years.

William Reynolds named dean

Dr. William Reynolds of the Hope English faculty has been appointed the college's dean for the arts and humanities.

Dr. Reynolds, a professor of English, had been serving a one-year appointment as interim dean for the arts and humanities since July 1, 1994. His new appointment runs through June 30, 1997.

"I am very pleased to announce the appointment of Dr. William D. Reynolds, professor of English, as dean for arts and humanities," said Dr. Jacob E. Nyenhuis, provost and professor of classics. "He not only brings to the position a wealth of experience as teacher, scholar and faculty leader, but he also has served very ably this past year as interim dean."

"Bill Reynolds has many fine personal qualities as well—a gentle nature, a ready wit, compassion, and dedication to God and to other people," he said. "He also has the steadiness, persistence and optimism that seems typical of the indomitable Cubs fan that he is."

"It has been a pleasure to work with him this past year, as well as on various committees over the years," Dr. Nyenhuis said. "I look forward to our continued collaboration in guiding the arts and humanities to new levels of excellence in the years ahead."

The college's academic departments are grouped within four divisions: the arts, the humanities, the natural sciences and the social sciences. The arts include art, dance, music and theatre; the humanities include English, history, modern and classical languages, philosophy, political science and religion.

Dr. Reynolds has been a member of the Hope English faculty since 1971. He chaired the department of English from 1987 until his appointment as interim dean in 1994.

He co-edited the book It's a Print: Detective Fiction from Page to Screen, which was published in October by the Popular Press of Bowling Green State University in

Dr. William Reynolds

Ohio. He also contributed one of the book's 13 essays: "The Patriarchy Restored: BBC Television's Adaptation of Dorothy Sayers's 'Strong Poison,' 'Have His Carcase' and 'Gaudy Night.'"

Dr. Reynolds has had several articles and reviews published, in journals including Christianity and Literature, Clues, Crime and Detective Stories, and The Armchair Detective. He has also regularly presented papers during the Annual Convention of the Popular Culture Association. He is a member of the Popular Culture Association, the Modern Language Association, and the Conference on Christianity and Literature.

Courses he has taught at the college have included expository writing and world literature, as well as on the nature of poetry and drama, the history of the English language, and British literature of the Old and Middle English periods and the earlier Renaissance. He has been a member or chair of several committees at Hope, and co-chaired the Faculty-Staff Division of the Hope in the Future capital campaign.

Dr. Reynolds holds his undergraduate degree from Xavier University, a master's degree from Columbia University and a doctorate from the University of Illinois. He and his wife Maura, who is also a member of Hope's faculty, live in Holland and have two daughters, Kathleen and Mary Elizabeth. ✍

Professor Bartley is represented by "The Midnight Tech's Meditation." Professor Ridl's poems are "Coach Goes Down the Hall Wondering Where all the Men Went," "Ref" and "Last Ditch," a poem dedicated to Hope College sculptor Billy Mayer, associate professor of art and chairperson of the department.

More than 5,000 poets were solicited for work, which the editors then spent two years studying for selection. Among the 96 poets included in the collection are Philip Levine, John Updike, Joyce Carol Oates, John Ashberry, Maxine Hong Kingston, Herb Scott, Jim Daniels, Sharon Olds, Martin Espada, Ai, and Michael Chitwood, who will be reading at Hope with novelist Lee Smith on Sept. 21, 1995. Nine other poets represented have given readings at Hope.

John D. Cox '67, professor of English, has received one of only 14 fellowships awarded for 1995-96 by the Pew Evangelical Scholars Program.

The $35,000 grant will give Dr. Cox a year's leave of absence from teaching and enable him to continue working on a book titled The Devil and Society in Early English Drama.

In 1994, the Pew Evangelical Scholars Program received 237 applications. Only one in 17 applications was funded for the 1995-96 academic year.

Dr. Cox has for several years been conducting research on the extensive use of devils in medieval and Renaissance drama in England, attempting to assess the reasons for and significance of their roles. William Shakespeare, for example, in the first part of Henry VI, depicted Joan of Arc as a witch, accompanied by devils. Dr. Cox has determined that medieval playwrights used devils as a means of social criticism and satire, and that the patterns they established carried over into the later use of devils in secular drama.

James Gentile, who is dean for the natural sciences and the Kenneth G. Herrick Professor of Biology, has been honored by the Illinois State University Alumni Association.

Dr. Gentile received one of three "Alumni Achievement Awards" presented on Saturday, April 8, recognized for his accomplishments and contributions to the university, located in Normal, Ill. Dr. Gentile received his master's in biology from the university in 1970, and his doctorate in genetics in 1974.

He is a specialist on environmental carcinogenesis and new genetic technologies. In addition to having articles published and participating in conferences related to his research interests, he has also been playing a leadership role in "Project Kaleidoscope," a Washington, D.C.-based initiative focusing on identifying and promoting effective models for undergraduate mathematics and science education.

Nancy Nicodemus, professor of English, was named an award winner in the Arts on the Park 13th annual WORDART American Poets Competition at Arts on the Park, Lakeland, Fla., on Wednesday, March 8.

A total of 17 winning works were chosen and are available in a 20-page chapbook published by Arts on the Park. Professor Nicodemus was named an "Award of Merit" winner for her poem

"More Than One Spiraled Ribcage."

Todd Steen, associate professor of economics, has been named managing editor of Christian Scholar's Review.

Dr. Steen was chosen on Saturday, April 22, by representatives of the journal's sponsoring institutions during the annual meeting of its trustees and editorial board. His responsibilities include supervising the journal's typesetting, printing, circulation, advertising and finances.

In addition, he will have an article published in the journal's December issue.

Christian Scholar's Review features articles dealing with all aspects of Christian thought and the interrelationship of Christian thought with all areas of scholarly interest. Published four times a year, in March, June, September and December, the journal will begin its 25th year with its September issue. The journal has 40 sponsoring institutions, including Hope.

Allen Verhey of the religion faculty was one of three editors of From Christ to the World: Introductory Readings in Christian Ethics, published in January by the William B. Eerdmans Publishing Company of Grand Rapids, Mich.

His co-editors, Dr. Wayne G. Boulton and Dr. Thomas D. Kennedy, were both members of Hope's religion faculty for a time.

According to Dr. Verhey, the book's origins lie in the trio's years together at the college.

"We began work on it when we were all occasionally teaching Christian ethics at Hope," he said. "It was nurtured by a lot of conversation about what students should know and about what belonged in an introductory text."

Dr. Verhey noted that he and his colleagues desired a text that included treatment of current moral issues but that set those issues in the context of important methodological concerns. Since those available at the time focused on either moral problems or on methodology, they set out to create their own.

Donald Williams, professor of chemistry, has been named to a Board of Governors appointed by the Michigan Low-Level Radioactive Waste Authority to help shape Michigan's approach to safely managing and isolating the state's low-level radioactive waste.

Under recent amendments to state law, the Board of Governors must develop a series of recommendations, within six months, to submit to the authority. The recommendations will focus on waste management options, waste minimization strategies and how to conduct a volunteer host community process.

The 11-member board includes representatives from public interest and environmental groups, generators of low-level radioactive waste, universities, the general public, the Michigan Department of Health and the Attorney General's Office.

Dr. Williams, who has been appointed the board's interim chairperson, has been actively involved in radioactive waste issues for many years, serving as a consultant to the Nuclear Energy Institute and the Department of Energy. He has conducted workshops and presentations on nuclear issues for teachers, the media and the public, and at Hope teaches a course on the chemistry of radioactive waste. ✍

Changing of the guard

Max De Pree remembered for thoughtful guidance

Max De Pree '48 retires from the chairmanship of the college's Board of Trustees remembered for being true to the servant-leader model that he has promoted in both his management and his writing.

De Pree is retiring from the board's chairmanship at the end of June. He has served on the board since 1983, and has been its chairman since 1987.

"Max De Pree has been an outstanding board chair," said Hope College President Dr. John H. Jacobson. "He is a man of Christian commitment with a humane approach to questions of management and organization."

De Pree, who is chairman emeritus of the Zeeland, Mich.-based Herman Miller Inc., has been the second member of his family to chair the college's board. His brother, Hugh De Pree '38, was chair from 1966 to 1978.

Close ties with Herman Miller have also become something of a tradition with the board's chairs. Both De Prees are past presidents and chief executive officers of Herman Miller. In addition, the board's new chair, J. Kermit Campbell, is currently the company's chairman and CEO (please see the related story on this page for more about his appointment).

De Pree is known and respected as an advocate of participatory management. In addition to seeing such principles applied successfully at Herman Miller, he has also outlined them in two best-selling books: Leadership Is an Art and Leadership Jazz.

The company has been praised in Fortune magazine for its corporate culture. His books have received strongly favorable reviews in publications ranging from Time to The Wall Street Journal to United Airlines' VisaVis magazine. De Pree's recognition has included election by the Fortune magazine board of editors to the Junior Achievement

Retiring and new board chairs Max De Pree '48 (left) and J. Kermit Campbell share not only a gift for leadership but also specific background in it: De Pree was previously, and Campbell is currently, chairman and chief executive officer of Herman Miller Inc. in Zeeland, Mich. Both joined Hope's board in 1983.

National Business Hall of Fame in 1992.

De Pree's corporate experience and perspective have been an asset to the college, according to President Jacobson, who notes, "His vision has benefitted the entire institution."

"In my association with Max in his role as board chair over the last eight years, I've had many enjoyable and profitable conversations, and I've really enjoyed the opportunity to learn his insights and exchange ideas with him on a wide range of issues about the college and beyond the college," President Jacobson said.

De Pree, however, is characteristically modest about his service on the college's behalf.

"It's a very special privilege to be allowed to be involved in something like this, which is clearly part of the Lord's work but also carries with it a strong sense of accountability," he said.

"It isn't that you serve on a board just because of the honor," De Pree said. "You have to do the work, and you're held accountable for what you do as a member of the board."

His emphasis on accountability is one reason that he views the establishment of the Trustee Affairs Committee—which focuses on the selection of new board members and also the board's operation—as a significant accomplishment of his time as chair.

During his tenure as chair, the college also developed, ran and successfully concluded the Hope in the Future campaign, an effort that significantly enhanced the college's endowment. In addition, his service on the board also included chairing the search committee that ultimately led to Dr. Jacobson being appointed Hope's 10th president in 1987.

"As chairman of the Hope College Board of Trustees, Max followed his own advice," said the Rev. Peter Semeyn '73 of Palos Heights, Ill., who joined the board in 1988. "Some leaders run out in front and pull the group behind in their wake, others move behind and push the group in the direction they want them to take. Max chose to stand beside us voicing his beliefs and demonstrating his competence and resolve, gently, ever so gently." ✍

J. Kermit Campbell a proven leader

J. Kermit Campbell of Holland, Mich., chairman and chief executive officer of Herman Miller Inc., will assume new duties as chair of the Hope College Board of Trustees on July 1.

"I'm excited at the prospect that Kerm Campbell will be our next board chair," said Hope College President Dr. John H. Jacobson. "He has a lively mind and an engaging personality, and will give good leadership to the board."

"He knows the college very well," he said. "He has already served for an extended period of time on the board, and has served on the board's Executive Committee and as the chair of several significant board committees—including the Academic Affairs Committee."

"In addition, he is a recognized leader in the business community, locally, nationally and internationally," Dr. Jacobson said. "And he is very much in tune with Hope College's commitment to strive for academic excellence in the context of the Christian faith."

Campbell has been with Herman Miller since 1992. He has been a member of the college's Board of Trustees since 1983, and was chosen as chair during the board's May 4-5 meeting.

In addition to his service as a member of the board, his activities on the college's behalf have included serving on the Steering Committee for the Hope in the Future capital campaign, which concluded in June of 1994, and as chair of the 1992-93 Holland/Zeeland Community Campaign. He and his wife, Sallie, have established the "Evelyn Spallinger Campbell Scholarship Fund" at Hope in memory of his mother.

Campbell was group vice president at Dow Corning Corporation from 1987 to 1992, responsible for all operations in the United States. His career at Dow Corning began in 1960. He served as manager of new products research; technical director for the European area; vice president and general manager of fluids, resins and process industries business; and vice president for personnel, communications and governmental affairs. He holds 25 patents.

He serves on the American Architecture Foundation Board of Regents, SPX Corporation Board of Directors, Grand Rapids Opera Board, Henry Ford Museum

Board of Trustees and the Michigan Partnership for New Education. He chairs the Michigan Cities in Schools Board of Directors, and has chaired the State of Michigan Partners in Education Task Force. He serves as co-chair for Michigan First.

His past activities include Michigan 2000 Steering Committee, serving as chairman of the Midland Symphony, serving as chairman of the Midland County Growth Council, serving as campaign general chairman of Midland Junior Achievement and Midland County United Way, the Saginaw Valley University Board of Fellows and Impression 5 Museum Board of Trustees.

He is a graduate of the University of Kansas and went to graduate school at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he was a Sloan Fellow. He and Sallie have two children, one of whom, Jim, is a 1985 Hope graduate. ✍

Research unmask new treatment

What began as a "what if" conversation between a Hope student and his faculty mentor has led to the development of a new way to provide rescue breathing or CPR to football players who have neck injuries.

In the fall of 1992, Dr. Richard Ray, the college's head athletic trainer, and Rob Farrell '94, then a Hope junior and one of his student assistants, were contemplating a requirement from the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) that resuscitation be delivered through an intervening mask instead of through direct mouth-to-mouth contact. The shape of the mask suggested something else to Farrell and Dr. Ray—a different way of providing resuscitation to injured players in general.

"There has been a great controversy over the last few years about the safest and best way to take care of a football player who's down on the field with a cervical spine injury—a neck injury—and also happens to not be breathing," said Dr. Ray, also an associate professor of physical education.

"The problem from most athletic trainers' standpoint is that if you try to remove the helmet, you jostle the head and neck too much, and you can cause further injury," he said. "In addition, because the players are wearing shoulder pads that keep their shoulders an inch or so off the ground, if you take the helmet off, the head flops down on the ground, causing the neck to hyperextend."

"But you also have to have access to the airway somehow, and the face mask gets in the way," he said.

According to Dr. Ray, the traditional way of dealing with the problem has been to remove the face mask only, a process which he noted takes time and can still move the player's head. On that fall practice day, however, he and Farrell wondered whether the plastic mask that Hope uses to meet the OSHA requirement could be slid over an injured player's mouth while the face mask was still on. With a tube that protrudes from the "pocket mask" slipped up through the face mask, resuscitation might no longer require its removal.

"We first tried it on a CPR mannequin, and discovered that it was indeed possible to do artificial respiration on a CPR mannequin through the face mask using the pocket mask," Dr. Ray said. "Then we thought it was reasonable to go on to some human trials."

The trials, conducted during the 1993-94 academic year, involved the college's biomechanical engineering laboratory and the expertise of Dr. Carl Luchies, who is an assistant professor of engineering, and Doug Bazuin '94, then a Hope senior and engineering student. Using instrumentation developed just for the study, the four researchers compared the Hope "pocket mask insertion technique" with the three methods traditionally used to remove the face mask: using a manual screwdriver, using a power screwdriver and cutting its plastic clips with a scissors-like "Trainer's Angel."

Such experimental analysis of the techniques had not been done before, according to Dr. Ray. The results, he said, were encouraging.

"What we found was that the 'pocket mask insertion technique' allows us to begin artificial respiration one to two cycles earlier than if you would have to reposition the face mask," Dr. Ray said.

"It did not cause less motion than repositioning the face mask by removal with a power screwdriver or a manual screwdriver. That was the same," he said. "But it caused significantly less motion than did removal with the 'Trainer's Angel' cutting device."

Dr. Ray noted that he hasn't yet had an opportunity to try the new technique, and added that, as enthused as he is about it, he isn't anxious to. "I hope that this is something that we practice and practice for and never have to use," he said. ✍

Study views teens and "slasher" films

In the on-going effort to understand the impact of television and film violence on viewers' attitudes and behavior, Dr. Deirdre Johnston of the communication faculty believes that viewers' reasons for watching deserve a look.

"People view for different reasons, and these reasons influence their interpretations and responses," said Dr. Johnston, an assistant professor of communication.

Dr. Johnston surveyed 220 high school freshmen and sophomores to determine why the 13- to 16-year-olds viewed "slasher films" like Friday the 13th and A Nightmare on Elm Street, known for their depictions of graphic violence and horror. She also gathered information on the students and how they felt about their film experience.

"We find that teen-agers have a tremendous desire to see this type of graphic horror and graphic violence—and the more violent it is, the better," she said. "But yet there are very big differences in how they interpret and internalize those experiences."

While other studies have examined viewer motivation, Dr. Johnston noted that they have tended to consider each group of viewers as a generalized whole. Her study, published in the spring issue of the journal Human Communication Research, identifies differences within the group she surveyed.

"I focused more on the individual differences," she said. "People are different and there are subgroups of individuals that are differentiated by certain characteristics, and these different subgroups have different motivations, different reasons and different responses to the media that they're watching."

Dr. Johnston's research identified four basic motivations among the adolescent filmgoers she surveyed: gore-watching, thrill-watching, independent-watching and problem-watching. In addition to having some feelings in common about the films, the members of each group also often shared certain personality characteristics.

"Gore-watchers," for example, felt little empathy for others, feared little and enjoyed new, exciting experiences. They were interested in the blood and mayhem depicted on screen, and in seeing the victims suffer. They also tended to identify with the killer, and made statements like "I'm interested in the ways people die," and "I like to see victims get what they deserve." Their mood generally had little to do with whether or not they attended one of the films, and was also little influenced by the viewing experience itself.

"Thrill-watchers," like the gore-watchers, enjoyed new, exciting experiences, but unlike them were highly empathetic. They enjoyed suspense and the excitement of being scared. Thrill-watchers identified with neither the killers nor the victims—suggesting to Dr. Johnston that they generally dismiss the films' reality, and don't internalize the conflict they see on the screen. They were generally in a positive state of mind before watching the films, and were positive afterward, too.

"Independent-watchers" in general felt little empathy for others, although they did tend to identify with the films' victims. They enjoyed feeling brave for watching the frightening films. Like the thrill-watchers, they were generally in a positive state of mind both before and after viewing the films.

"Problem-watchers" were often dealing with feelings of loneliness or anger, or avoiding problems at home. They felt little empathy, and were often substance abusers, although, like the independent-watchers, they identified with the films' victims. They consistently reported being in a negative mood both before and after watching a "slasher film."

Dr. Johnston believes that such different categories could likely be found within other viewer populations as well. She also feels that additional investigation in the area could one day lead to a new way of understanding the interaction of viewer and viewing experience.

She cited the profiles developed of the gore-watchers and thrill-watchers identified in her own study as examples of how.

"The gore-watchers are most at risk for aggression," she said. "When they report things like, 'I like to see the victim get what she deserves,' they are expressing a rationale for violence—that the victim is somehow deserving—that is a very dangerous attitude, and we see that consistently in their responses."

"In addition to that, they're characterized by low empathy," she said. "That's a personality trait that characterizes their reactions to other people—not just their reactions to film characters. They also have low fear, and low empathy and low fear is a concerning combination of personality traits for filtering this graphic slasher movie-type content."

"In contrast, the thrill watchers appear to be what you would expect the normal teenager to be—they're seeking excitement, suspense, arousal," Dr. Johnston said. "We know that sensation-seeking needs have biochemical bases in the brain—and that they are especially high during the late teen-age years and start to level off at 19 or 20, so it's not at all surprising that a portion of the teenagers seek this content for those reasons."

"And of the four viewing motivations, one would be less concerned about the long-term effects or the behavioral effects of graphic horror on thrill-seeking adolescents," she said. ✍

The game's afoot

Site-clearing is underway in earnest for the Haworth Conference Center and Cook Residence Hall, which will stand between Ninth and 10th Streets east of College Avenue. The project displaces 16 houses, 10 of which are being relocated.

Demolition of some structures began in March. Belt and Beeuwkes cottages, the subject of the accompanying photos, inaugurated the exodus phase of the project by voyaging from their east Ninth Street homes to farther east on 15th Street on Wednesday, May 10.

At top right, Beeuwkes eases gingerly onto Ninth Street. At center above, the house travels south past the DeWitt Center on Columbia Avenue. At bottom right, Belt waits to be placed above its new basement, which lies between Columbia and the railroad tracks. Two more homes are going across the street, creating a "mini-neighborhood" that will be bracketed by the Columbia Avenue Apartments to the west and College East Apartments to the north.

All of the structures being moved are expected to be ready for use by the time classes begin in August. Those being preserved include the historic Keppel House, which contains the offices of the campus ministries staff and will travel east seven lots along 10th Street, to rest west of Gilmore Hall.

The Haworth Conference Center is scheduled to be ready for use in August of 1996; the Cook Residence Hall by the spring of 1997. ✎

The Return

The timing of Alumni Weekend is no coincidence.

By setting it during graduation weekend, the thinking goes, alumni who have ties to the senior class—perhaps as parents or grandparents—can make one visit to campus to attend both their Friday-Sunday reunion activities and Sunday's Baccalaureate and Commencement. For those traveling a distance, that is no small consideration.

That is the practical reasoning, but there is more to appreciate in the events' relationship in time. Both groups, alumni and alumni-soon-to-be, are in their own way observing Commencement—an event that is by definition a beginning, but in the reaching easier to view as an end.

For the graduating seniors, on the verge of post-undergraduate lives, the focus is generally on conclusion—and fairly so. Commencement is the moment to which all their activity at Hope, all their hard work both within the classroom and without, has led.

For the alumni, who have been leading the lives that the graduates are anticipating, the emphasis is on origin. They have taken many paths, yet for a few days celebrate the beginning with others who started in the same place—with their own graduations of 20, 30, 40, 50 or 65 years before.

Alumni Board names new members

During its May meeting, the Alumni Association Board of Directors chose its officers for 1995-96 and appointed four new members.

The board also made three reappointments. Janet Lawrence '80 of Schenectady, N.Y., and Jennifer Liggett '80 of Kalamazoo, Mich., will continue to serve as president and vice president respectively. Bryan Bush '84 of Anaheim, Calif., was elected secretary, succeeding Cal Bruins '61 of Paradise Valley, Ariz., whose term on the board is ending.

The board's new members are Claire Vander Meulen '75 Gibbs of Melbourne, Fla. (Southeast Region); Michelle Baker '89 Laverman of Phoenix, Ariz. (Southwest Region); Linda Selander '64 Schaap of Barrington, Ill. (Central Region); and Andrew Van Eden '97 of Holland, Mich.

Reappointed to the board were Janette Vandenberg '79 Aardema of Grand Rapids, Mich. (West Michigan Region); Bush (California Region); and Liggett (Kalamazoo/Southwest Michigan Region).

In addition, Valerie Pacheco '96 of Holland, Mich., formerly Junior Class Representative, was appointed Senior Class Representative.

Gibbs is benefits systems manager at the Melbourne, Fla., corporate headquarters of the Harris Corporation, and has held a number of positions in various areas of human resources management since joining the company in 1983. She is also a former member of the Hope admissions staff. She holds a master's degree in higher education administration from Michigan State University and an MBA from Florida Tech University. She is president of Brevard County Compensation and Benefits Association, past president of PEO Chapter GW, and an elder for Eastminster Presbyterian Church. A fourth generation Hope student, she recently served on the Class of '75 reunion committee.

Laverman is a social worker for Scottsdale Memorial Hospital-North, and holds a masters in social work from Arizona State University. She was previously with Baptist Hospitals and Health Systems. She served a two-year term as secretary of the Arizona Association of Adult Day Health Care in 1990 and 1991, and was a member of the Gerontology Advisory Committee, ASU West, in 1991. She is a member of Christ Community Church, where she served as deacon. She helped plan an alumni event in her region in 1993. Her husband is Mark Laverman '88.

Schaap is in retail work with Cabbage Rose Cottage and a bookkeeper with her son's business, J.B. Enterprises Landscape Co. She was previously an elementary school teacher and substitute teacher. She was a volunteer with the local schools when her children were students, and also involved in scouting, and is an elder at St. Paul's United Church of Christ. She was a volunteer with the Hope in the Future campaign, and on behalf of the Office of Admissions phones students accepted at Hope. She and husband James Schaap '63 have two children: Alison '93 and Jon.

Van Eden hopes to teach at the elementary school level. Active in Student Congress, he will serve as vice president during 1995-96. He is a Hope representative for the community Weed and Seed program, and is a member of the Macatawa Area Coordinating Council (M.A.C.C.) Future Search Conference. He has been with the Holland Museum for three years—two years as a volunteer; one year on the staff. He is a 1993 graduate of Holland High School, and the son of Gail Van Eden of Holland and William Van Eden of West Olive, Mich.

Members of the board whose terms are ending are John Abe '79 of Naperville, Ill.; Bruins; Betty Whitaker '62 Jackson of Merritt Island, Fla.; and Barbara Woodruff '94 of Kentwood, Mich.

All of the appointments and term endings are effective July 1. ✍

Rob Pocock '77 receives MSA

The Hope College Alumni Association presented a Meritorious Service Award to Robert T. Pocock '77 of Holland, Mich., during the second annual Alumni Festival on Saturday, May 6.

The Meritorious Service Award recognizes a person's contributions to Hope and its alumni through notable personal service and long-time involvement with the college. Hope presented its first Meritorious Service Award in May of 1993.

Pocock has been director of corporate communications with Priority Health Managed Benefits in Grand Rapids since 1993. He previously held positions with Biggs/Gilmore Communications and Nordstrom/Cox Marketing, and from 1978 to 1983 was a partner in the Toy Stop toy stores, which he had co-founded.

He was an associate director of admissions at Hope from 1977 to 1983. He has been an instructor in the department of communication since 1988, and in the department of political science since 1992. He and his wife Cindy Arnold '75 Pocock also served for a time as head residents for Cosmopolitan Hall.

Pocock has long been active as a volunteer on Hope's behalf. For many years he has served as an alumni caller, talking with prospective students. He has also been a guest lecturer on campus, speaking to campus organizations and classes, as well as during academic and extracurricular symposia, and to the faculty through Eli Lilly Foundation Teaching Enhancement Workshops.

He has assisted Hope in its annual fund-raising efforts, in addition to being a volunteer with the Campaign for Hope and Hope in the Future fund-raising campaigns. He has also recruited and supervised the ushers for the Christmas Vespers services since 1978, and has served on his class reunion planning committee.

A member of the Cosmopolitan fraternity, Pocock as a student created a stained glass rendering of the fraternity crest that still hangs in the Cosmopolitan Hall lobby. The fraternity's Alumni Association presented him with its "Pardeigma Menous" ("Example of Spirit") award in 1985.

Pocock's service has extended well beyond Hope to West Michigan. The organizations to which he has given his time include The Economic Club of Grand Rapids, the Advertising Federation of Grand Rapids, Hospice of Holland, Camp Geneva, United Way of Kent County, the Boy Scouts of America, Christ Memorial Church and First Presbyterian Church. ✍

Alumni Alert

By Lynne Powe '86

As surely as the rhythm of the seasons come and go, so too, another academic year has drawn to a close.

May is an exciting time to be on Hope College's campus. We host two of our biggest celebrations during a three-day period: Alumni Weekend, which features 10 class reunions, and Commencement.

It is interesting to observe, and talk with, the people participating in these activities. As always, during the final month graduating seniors worked at a fevered pitch. There wasn't much time for sunning in the Pine Grove as they scurried to complete coursework, resumes and graduate school applications; gather faculty references; and interview for jobs.

It is a time of significant transition for our newest class of alumni, as they are both eager and scared to leave the security of Hope College to explore the world beyond. A new chapter has begun. Many do not fully realize what the real world holds for them, and the world does not yet know the many talents these individuals bring.

While here, most students appreciate Hope College. However, once they have had a chance to reflect on their undergraduate experiences, they develop an even greater respect for this place.

Our alumni, representing all eras, continually reinforce this sentiment—through calls, letters and visits. During Alumni Weekend, a record 900 alumni and friends returned to Hope for a time of renewal—an opportunity to reminisce and renew ties with old friends, classmates and former faculty.

One of the weekend highlights was the Alumni Banquet and the recognition of the 1995 Distinguished Alumni Award recipients: Wayne Vriesman '59; James Bultman '63; Vern '64 and Carla VandeBunte '65 Sterk; and John Abe '79. These individuals were honored for their achievements in the varied disciplines of broadcasting, education, missions and business. Each person has successfully affected those around them.

While their accomplishments are significant, they represent each and every one of you. You are all playing a role in influencing your communities on a daily basis.

As Alumni Association President Janet Lawrence '80 noted during her speech during the banquet, "Very few people can have a great positive impact on the world, but we can all try to do what we can in our corner of it."

Alumni News

A century of hope

When she retired from the Hope faculty in 1962, Marguerite Meyer '17 Prins told the Hope College Alumni Magazine she was doing so because she wanted "to live a little longer."

In the July, 1962, story she was speaking figuratively, discussing a desire to have time to spend with family and gardening and traveling. She has also more than done so literally, however. On Sunday, April 30, Prins, who lives in Holland, Mich., turned 100.

She is one of the college's oldest living alumni. Hope has addresses for only two others from the Class of 1917 or earlier (not including Prep School graduates), both of those from the Class of 1916.

Prins's active association with Hope College touched six decades—from her years as a student, to a brief period on the faculty in 1922 and 1923, to a longer stint from 1937 to 1962.

She taught both French and Spanish. Her service to the college is recalled in the "Marguerite Prins French Award," presented each year to a graduating senior during the Honors Convocation.

Prins graduated when the Rev. Ame Vennema was serving as Hope's fourth president. She taught under three more—

The Hope campus provided a fitting setting for celebrating Margaret Meyer '17 Prins's 100th birthday. In addition to being an alumna, she was on the faculty from 1921 to 1923 and 1937 to 1962, teaching French and Spanish. Pictured are Hope College President Dr. John H. Jacobson and Prins.

Edward D. Dimment, Wynand Wichers and Irwin J. Lubbers—and there have been three others since. It is far easier to list the current major campus buildings that stood when she was a student (Van Vleck, Graves and Voorhees halls, and the President's Home) than those that arose in the years following.

Given her history with the college, the campus made an appropriate setting for a celebration in her honor on Saturday, April 29. Family and friends gathered to help her mark the occasion.

Prins's centennial was also noted by an article in The Grand Rapids (Mich.) Press earlier in the week. In citing her many trips abroad (including several visits to France), her correspondence with her nine grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren, and the books and magazines she loves to read, the article echoed the sentiments she had expressed in the Alumni Magazine some 23 years before.

"Marguerite Prins," Press reporter Esther Witteveen wrote, "finds delight in living."

Dutch soar to All-Sports title

Excellence in athletics is a Hope College hallmark.

The just-completed school year epitomized that standard. In fact, Hope student-athletes set new standards of excellence.

- ❖ Hope claimed the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association (MIAA) all-sports championship for the 12th time since 1980, finishing 14 points ahead of the nearest challenger.
- ❖ Over the course of the year, Hope athletes competed in NCAA post-season competition in 10 sports, a school record. Teams and individual athletes qualified for NCAA action in women's cross country, men's soccer, men's and women's basketball, men's and women's swimming, softball, women's tennis and men's and women's track.
- ❖ The spring sports season was highlighted by the MIAA championship performance of the softball team. The Flying Dutch, under coach Karla Hoesch '73 Wolters, went on to play in the NCAA tournament for the third time in five years, winning the Central region championship and then finishing fifth in the nation at the Division III championships.
- ❖ Freshman Kelly Etheridge of Dimondale, Mich., became the first first-year track athlete to win All-America honors as she finished fifth in the heptathlon at the Division III track and field championships.
- ❖ Senior Mark Kuiper of Lansing, Mich., culminated a brilliant collegiate baseball career by winning the MIAA batting championship. A GTE Academic All-American who will attend the University of Chicago Medical School in the fall, Kuiper rewrote Hope's baseball record book as he became the first player to bat over .400 twice in his career.
- ❖ Sophomores Audrey Coates of Holland, Mich., and Becky Lucas of Kalamazoo, Mich., qualified for the NCAA Division III women's tennis championships, while senior Kristen Kline of Marshall, Mich., competed in the women's national collegiate golf championships.

Freshman Kelly Etheridge vaulted to All-America distinction as heptathlete.

- ❖ The men's tennis team had its most successful season in more than a decade, finishing third, tying the single season record for dual match victories (11-7) while finishing third in the Great Lakes Colleges Association tournament and third in the final MIAA standings.
- ❖ Audrey Coates, who became the first Hope women's tennis player to win 20 or more matches in two consecutive seasons, was voted the most valuable player in the MIAA and presented the league Sue Little Award for outstanding sportsmanship.
- ❖ Baseball pitcher Darin Corcoran, a senior from Reading, Mich., became the fifth Hope hurler in MIAA history to throw a no-hitter as the Flying Dutchmen blanked Kalamazoo 12-0. Softball pitchers Nicki Mannes, a senior from Wyoming, Mich., and Keri Roelofs, a junior from Hudsonville, Mich., were both voted Louisville Slugger Division III All-Americans by the National Softball Coaches Association. Mannes set the Hope career record for pitching victories (40) while Roelofs established a new school mark for wins in a season (16).

- ❖ League honors were bestowed on several Hope athletes. Voted to the All-MIAA first team in their respective spring sports were: baseball — Mark Kuiper; softball — junior Laurie Byington of Portage, Mich., senior Nicki Mannes, junior Wendy Moore of Wyoming, Mich., and junior Keri Roelofs; women's tennis — sophomore Audrey Coates and sophomore Becky Lucas; men's track — junior Erik Carpenter of Stamford, Conn., senior Eric Nichol of Bellaire, Mich., and junior Nick Ward of Port Huron, Mich.; women's track — freshman Kelly Etheridge, sophomore Amy Meyers of Portland, Mich., and junior Stefanie Oatis of East Grand Rapids, Mich.

- ❖ Hope had three MIAA champions in track and field. Junior Erik Carpenter won the 1,500 meter run for the second consecutive year while junior Nick Ward won the shotput and freshman Kelly Etheridge was champion in the high jump.
- ❖ Karla Wolters was honored by her softball coaching peers by being named the Central Region coach-of-the-year for the third time since 1992.
- ❖ Senior Mark Kuiper was voted a first team GTE Academic All-American in baseball for the second consecutive year. Junior Laurie Byington was voted to the GTE all-district academic softball team.

Senior Nicki Mannes set career mark for pitching success.

Freshman Sarah Frego and Dutch teammates celebrated MIAA championship.
